DETAILED ACTION

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on June 09, 2006 has been entered.

2. Claims 1-9, 12 and 15 are canceled. Claims 13-14 are amended. Claims 10-11 and 13-14 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

3. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

4. Claims 10-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

As set forth in MPEP 2106 (II) (A):

A. Identify and Understand Any Practical Application Asserted for the Invention

The claimed invention as a whole must accomplish a practical application. That is, it must produce a "useful, concrete and tangible result." State Street, 149 F.3d at 1373, 47 USPQ2d at 1601-02. The purpose of this requirement is to limit patent protection to inventions that possess a certain level of "real world" value, as opposed to subject matter that represents nothing more than an idea or concept, or is simply a starting point for future investigation or research (Brenner v. Manson, 383 U.S. 519, 528-36, 148 USPQ 689, 693-96); In re Ziegler, 992, F.2d 1197, 1200-03, 26 USPQ2d 1600, 1603-06 (Fed. Cir. 1993)). Accordingly, a complete disclosure should contain some indication of the practical application for the claimed invention, i.e., why the applicant believes the claimed invention is useful.

Apart from the utility requirement of 35 U.S.C. 101, usefulness under the patent eligibility standard requires significant functionality to be present to satisfy the useful result aspect of the practical application requirement. See Arrhythmia, 958 F.2d at 1057, 22 USPQ2d at 1036. Merely claiming nonfunctional descriptive material stored in a computer-readable medium does not make the invention eligible for patenting. For example, a claim directed to a word processing file stored on a disk may satisfy the utility requirement of 35 U.S.C. 101 since the information stored may have some "real world" value. However, the mere fact that the claim may satisfy the utility requirement of 35 U.S.C. 101 does not mean that a useful result is achieved under the practical application requirement. The claimed invention as a whole must produce a "useful, concrete and tangible" result to have a practical application.

Regarding claims 10-11, "a digital document discussion method", can be implemented without computer or machine. Because the limitation of claims 10-11, can be implemented by a human with a pencil, and a piece of paper for searching an electronic document. Thus, the languages of claims 10-11 raise a question as to whether the claimed method is directed merely to an abstract idea that is not tied to a producing a concrete, useful, and tangible result to from the basis of statutory subject matter under 35 U.S. C. § 101. Therefore, the claimed invention is non-statutory subject matter. The claims should be amended to indicate that the subject matter is implemented by a computer, i.e., a computer implemented method.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

5. Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 10 recites, "the discussion document based on" line 9. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Allowable Subject Matter

6. Claims 13-14 are allowed.

Reason For Indicating Allowable Subject Matter

7. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: Claims 13-14 identify distinct features, digital document method and computer-readable medium including computer program instruction for causing a computer to execute digital document program for a document storage step of storing a digitized document including a plurality of templates corresponding to documents in a document database, an attribute information storage step of storing attribute information on a user including a discussion requester and a discussion participant in an attribute information database, a template providing step of providing a template corresponding to a document to be discussed out of the templates stored in the document database to a first client at the discussion requester based on a work process relating to the document and the attribute information, a discussion document creation step of creating a discussion document based on the template at the first client, a material information accumulation step of accumulating a plurality of items of material information, a discussion request step of transmitting a discussion request with the discussion document from the first client to a second client at a discussion participant requesting the discussion participant to discuss the discussion document transmitted and displayed at the second client, a search step of searching material information associated with the discussion document from the plurality of items of material information, a material information providing step of providing the material information searched in the search step to the discussion participant when discussing the discussion document. The closest prior art, Yehuda et al (U.S. Patent No. 6,266,683), fails to suggest the claimed limitation as mentioned above. The claims 13-14 are hereby allowed.
